

You are invited to find out how humanistic psychology helps to generate a way of life, not only for the person himself in his own private psyche, but also for the same person as a social being, a member of society.

The subscription is £5.00 per year, which includes a subscription to Self and Society, or £3.00 for full-time students. (It is also possible to join the Association without the journal at the rate of £3.00, or £1.00 for full-time students.)

To: The Treasurer, Association for Humanistic Psychology,
57 Minster Road, London N.W.2.

I would like to join the AHP in Britain, and enclose my first year's subscription.

NAME

ADDRESS

.....
.....

OCCUPATION

QUALIFICATIONS

.....

RETURN

On mountain tops I have known ecstasy,
Not that the sky was clear, but that I came
Upwards with labour from the city's shame,
And found the soul's high place of mystery.
Then was the little world so far behind
That Lilliputian cares were all subdued
And, lofty in my wind-swept solitude
I found the snow-capped summits of the mind.

But, with the first chill shadow, that strange charm
Which, in her secret places, must fulfil
By urgent need, the earth's relentless will
Recalled me with affection deep and calm,
And, stupid with its sweetness, I retrace
My footsteps to this warmer, humbler place.

Marion Alford