

Letters to the Editor

Dear Vivian,

Greetings and good summer weather.

I am a senior lecturer in Education at the Auckland Teacher's College: since returning from sabbatical leave in London 1980, I have developed a Humanistic Lecturing and Teaching style that has proven a highly acceptable alternative to Behaviouristic teaching in my College seminars. The Humanistic teaching style works well with 5 to 12 year olds in State primary schools. I've based my teaching methodology on the readings of Rogers, Heron, Gordon and Maslow and the hosts of courses and workshops I did while in London in 1980.

I will be in London April 1986 and would like to make contact with teachers and lecturers doing Humanistic procedures.

I would be grateful if you could help me to make contact with people using Humanistic teaching styles. Do you think there would be sufficient interest in a Self and Society issue on Humanistic teaching method and practice for regular classroom teachers?

Very best wishes.

Very friendly, sincerely,
