

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I have recently moved to Caerphilly in South Wales and would very much like to know whether or not there are any humanistic psychology activities going on in the Caerphilly/Cardiff area.

I would also like to meet a co-counselling partner and would be pleased if anyone in the area could ring me on Caerphilly 866803.

With thanks and best wishes,

Dear Vivian,

I was very pleased to get the copies of People Line with my last two issues of the journal. This seemed an excellent idea. In spite of the so-called "permissive society" many people find it very difficult to meet up with suitable partners - or even meet up just with friends to share experiences with. The computer-dating people seem pretty impersonal, and at the same time very expensive. People Line seem to provide a good way of reaching sympathetic and like-minded people and just take it from there.

So what happened to it?
