EARLY MAN

Rekindles the fire thwacks wood scraps & cinders nudges pieces of charcoal glowing in the early light

Birds begin flight towards unknown destinations the land extends welcome through light breeze and dew drops

In bear skin & sandals he sits prodding embers flames reaching higher, higher & higher, birdsong advertises
break of the day and the sun also rises to greet early man

Torn between breakfast & fashioning his knife early man dithers bathes in the sunlight scribing a mandala in warm ash

A pot of stream water bubbles on the stove he moves to remove it stirring from meditation

Silence around him curdles into sounds familiar & friendly: the rasp of a crow an anonymous cough the call of a cockerel the smile from a tent as the flaps part open & his solitude is broken.
