

John Rowan in/and Self & Society, 1973 to date: A Complete Bibliography

Richard House and David Kalisch (co-editors)

As editors we have the good fortune to have access to the full 42 volumes of Self & Society journal since it was first published in 1973. Even the briefest perusal of this impressive archival library will see immediately that one person's contribution to this journal has dwarfed all others: those of our inimitable Festschrift subject, John Rowan. Given that before too long, the whole back archive of S&S will be freely available online for all members and subscribers, we decided to compile a full list of all John's contributions to the journal since Volume 1, No. 1, 1973. We made the strategic decision to include only articles, reports, review articles, poems and comments, but not his book reviews – because if we had included the latter, this bibliography would likely have taken up the whole issue! There surely can't be anyone in the history of Humanistic Psychology so well read as John, and his reviews for this journal are probably approaching three figures.

As you will see, the sheer range and scale of these contributions to the Humanistic Psychology oeuvre are quite breathtaking, and we are delighted to present this invaluable resource both to readers and to John alike. At the very least, the bibliography will hopefully enable John to check quickly and easily whether his publishing CV is up to date!

May John continue to publish his invaluable contributions in this journal, and for Humanistic Psychology, for many years to come!
